...it's not about superiors (although that's ALSO a problem). We need someone there who has knowledge about collection and review, as well as technological capability. (It's usually Anthony DiSenso)

It sounds like you haven't done much, if any, of the groundwork necessary to have this conversation seriously. But let's see how it goes, I guess.

Great. I will call you then. Should I loop in anyone else from your office, given the obvious need?

Hi Greg,

Our deadline to discuss any proposed limitations on email searches, or to confer on methodology, is Friday.

I would have expected to hear from you on this before today.

Are there any proposals you want to send us? We should probably schedule a meeting this week to actually discuss search terms -- ideally with someone from your office who is prepared both on the case itself and in having authority to actually discuss the substance of search terms.

Obviously, if Defendants fail to engage at all, that will be something we raise in our opposition.

Yours,

Remy.
